Bachelor of Holistic Arts (BA)

This degree includes a broad base of knowledge which includes both theory and practicum. Application of the arts within the holistic profession is based upon the selected major of study. The core requirements are designed to provide a knowledge base of traditional and alternative methodologies. Once complete, a broad range of electives are offered which include hypnotherapy, reiki, natural health, sociology, transpersonal psychology, and more.

Clinical Doctorate Degree (DCH), (ND), (PsyD)

The clinical doctoral degree involves a composition of theoretical and practical knowledge within the fields of clinical hypnotherapy, natural health, or naturopathy. It focuses on the clinical applicability of treating clients with natural health methods. Clinical hypnotherapists will take core courses that focus on research and clinical foundation. Hypnotherapy electives offer both clinical and transpersonal approaches. The core curriculum for naturopathy students focuses more on naturopathic treatment modalities, but these students may also choose to take the same electives as Natural Health students, learning more about the applicability of medicinal herbs, supplements, diet, homeopathy, accupressure, and more. A capstone project in the form of a thesis finishes the requirements for this degree.

Philosophical Doctorate Degree Programs (PhD)

The philosophical doctorate is both a clinical and philosophical degree. Its core curriculum educates students in the applicability of various clinical interventions. Electives allow for specialization; yet, in addition, a capstone project is required, which challenges students to make a unique contribution to their field of study.

The dissertation is the final stage of earning a philosophical degree at AHU. The dissertation is set up for a student to express a hypothesis regarding a certain aspect of hypnotherapy or natural health which can be proven through conducting supportive research. Students who are awarded the prestigious philosophical degree have established a unique domain within their speciality.
